

Monday, January 9, 2006

Welcome

Welcome to the San Antonio Real Estate Blog. This blog has been created to inform the public about general real estate concerns and items that are specific to the San Antonio, Texas area.

My name is Christina Whipple and I have been a Realtor in San Antonio since 1993. I have extensive experience assisting both buyers and sellers. The San Antonio market is in a constant state of flux, and a good agent sees the neighborhoods, the houses, and understands what is available and what is a fair price to ask or to offer for a given property.

I have been writing articles for several publications and my website, <http://www.ChristinaWhipple.com> for several years and thought that I would start a "blog" in order to post less formal, "quick", tips for my readers.

Please be sure to contact me at Christina@ChristinaWhipple.com if you have any questions about anything on the blog.

Posted by Christina Whipple in San Antonio Real Estate at 12:30

Love your San Antonio real estate blog! Your creativity in your brand on your website is super. Anonymous on Jan 10 2006, 13:22

Christina,

Very impressive blog format you have chosen! Really pleasant and easy on the eyes, very pleasing and nice to look at.

I listened to nearly every speaker during the recent online cyber space convention. After collecting the opinions of the speakers about what makes a web site effective, I have been studying the websites of the Cyber Stars. I have been specifically looking for examples that met the format recommended by some of the speakers.

I have also been studying the blog sites of the Cyber Star agents. First to see the content on the blogs (which presumably will be what the public wants). Next I have been noting which authors are generating interest and traffic as evidenced through the "comment" sections.

I will have to say that I like BOTH your blog site and your website the very best so far. If it weren't enough to have been impressed by your blog site, you can only imagine how delighted I was to click on your home page! After scanning dozens and dozens of web sites finally I see a tremendous example of what some of the speakers were talking about! Super graphics you have on there. Again, by far and away the best I have seen.

Several speakers during the convention mentioned that the public does not want to be slapped in the face with a vanity agent promotion website, with agent picture and bragging about "me, me, ME". Yours is only the second one I have found where the owner author has the courage to test that theory in reality by taking the idea to heart.

Keep up the GREAT work!

Jim in Ohio Anonymous on Mar 4 2006, 16:02